Length:

Inquiry prompts

- What is income tax?
- Why do we pay income tax?
- How much of your income with go to taxes?
- What other income deductions can I expect to pay?

Before you begin

- You may wish to prepare the story you'll share in step one below in advance. Decide if you will share the resources in step two in advance of the activity or present them in class.

Teaching strategies

In this activity, students will learn about possible deductions on their gross income in order to better estimate costs that may impact their lifestyle goals. Think back to when you received your first paycheck. Do you remember what you spent it on? Were you surprised about how little you actually made after deductions were taken?

- 1 Tell the story of your first paycheck to your students and ask a few of your students (if there are any) to share their first paycheck stories if they have their own. Consider explaining: What was different between earning a paycheck compared to earning allowance or being paid cash for babysitting or cutting lawns? What do you remember spending your first paycheck/paycheck on?
- 2 Present these resources or share them in advance to the activity to introduce students to income tax and other deductions: 100 Years of Income Tax in Canada (2:49), How Tax Works in Canada (11:09), and Understanding Your Paystub.
- 3 Working with a partner or individually, direct students to select one career to calculate the annual income tax deductions for. Find the career on Xello and use the Median salary to determine the annual net pay.
- 4 Have students share their findings. Ask your students:
 - What did you find surprising?
 - How do you think income deductions will impact your lifestyle goals?
 - Should everyone pay income tax?
