apply the filter to narrow the list of careers. Once students do this, they will be able to see the language arts-related careers in Xello, sorted by the strength of their matches (Excellent, Good, Fair, Poor.)

- 4 Direct students to examine their top 2 matches. As they read through the job description and core tasks for each, tell them to make note of language-related skills and compare those to core aspects, which can be found by selecting Find out why under the match result.
- 5 When students are finished taking notes, discuss the following questions as a class, adding skills to the list you made as a class as necessary:
 - Without naming careers, what are some language-related skills that you came across in the job descriptions?
 - How do you know these are necessary skills? Do the job descriptions and core tasks mention these skills explicitly or did you make an inference?
- 6 Next, instruct students to select one of their top 2 careers and work independently to answer the following questions:
 - Briefly describe the career you chose. Summarize the job description in your own words.
 - What are the top 3 language skills, in your opinion, that are most important for a person to possess if they want to pursue this career?
 - What is your advice for someone interested in this career? How can they develop the necessary language skills for this career? Be specific!
- 7 As students are working, make note of which career they each chose so that you can place them into groups of 3-4 with classmates who chose different careers, if possible. Once students are done writing, have them take turns sharing about their career with their groups. One student in each group should be the note-taker and write down the advice each student shares about how to develop the language skills necessary for their chosen career.
- 8 Once students are finished sharing with their groups, tell them to select one piece of advice that the note-taker recorded. Ask each group to share their advice with the class, and record what each group shares.
- 9 Once all groups have shared, tell students to read the list of language skills you compiled together at the beginning of class. Discuss the following questions as a class:
 - Do you have any language skills you'd like to add to the list after your group discussion and hearing from the other groups?
 - Do you notice any themes in this list of language skills? (i.e. related to reading comprehension, public speaking, etc.)
 - Look at the advice shared by the class. What are some of the most common things shared?
 - Think about what you've learned or worked on in the last week of language arts. Is there anything that ties in with the advice or language skills listed?
